

Extension, Outreach and ISR activities

Preamble:

One of the core responsibilities of an educational institution is to build capacity and resources to respond to the dynamic societal needs. Although India is still far from being a Utopian world in terms of general health, wellbeing; appropriate, timely and consistent responsiveness of educational institutions goes a long way in bettering the society and reducing the burden. Currently, the whole world is facing challenges in the field of healthcare, economics, academics and more. Hence it is imperative for higher educational institutions to have clear vision, strategies, plans and reflections of their contributions to the society.

Yenepoya (Deemed to be University) has stood the test of time and shouldered its social responsibilities in an exemplary manner through the development of sub-centres for health care, rural health care and development centre, departments involved in community engagement, collaborations, student engagement, and emergency responsiveness. Yenepoya (Deemed to be University) aims to take it forward to newer levels of excellence inconsonance with its Vision and Mission.

The objectives:

1. To foster the development of workforces so as to identify and respond to societal needs
2. To kindle student force to take up projects of social value
3. To integrate socially responsible activities into academics
4. To encourage and support research involving socially relevant challenges
5. To maintain consistency in supporting education, healthcare and rural development
